

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An air-conditioning system for a room has a flat cooling element arranged in a wall of the room, preferably the ceiling of the room. The cooling element is embedded in a plaster layer of the ceiling. The cooling element has at least one pre-manufactured web that is made of a carrier mat and at least one cooling pipe that is fastened to the carrier mat. A cooling medium is pumped through the cooling pipe.